BUDGET CONCERNS by Dr. Alan Darion

As I crunched through the numbers for next year’s budget, I have become increasingly concerned about the extent to which we are relying on what is essentially fund balance in the 20 – 21 budget. The danger of doing so, in light of the Act One index limitation, should be obvious.

We are making up an $817,382 shortfall, with, for want of better words, I will describe as “once-and-done” funds.

The $100,000 use of ACCESS funds is greater than the annual revenue we receive from it.

Digging into the 19 – 20 surplus of $588,831 shows the following:

- The difference between budgeted salary and benefits last year and their actual cost due to unanticipated retirements, was $431,577. Even if another eight professional employees were to retire next year, we would soon run out of senior staff. This is not ongoing savings.

- Actual transportation costs were $143,185 less than budgeted as were $61,000 in substitute salaries. Unless we again close down schools early, those savings will not be repeated.

- There is a $9,500 savings in advertising costs that will also not be ongoing.

These all total to $645,282, which is $56,431 MORE than the surplus, which indicates that other expenses were a bit over budget.

The proposed budget includes a built in shortfall in of $128,511 $45,807 which would also have to be taken out of fund balance.

If we receive funds from the CARES Act, this is not an ongoing revenue stream.

It is true that over the years we have usually had a “surplus,” or at least a smaller deficit than anticipated in our budget. Looking into how this happened over the last few years in more detail, however, shows the following.

- The difference between budgeted and actual expenditure is somewhat erratic. Some years over, and some under. I would not want to count on these values year-after-year.

- More consistent has been receiving more revenue than anticipated. In part because of what I believe is the correct, conservative approach that Dave has taken with these numbers. At first glance the excess income seems to be consistently around $500,000, and in fact, in the 16 – 17 fiscal year it greatly exceeded that figure. But there are some caveats. Much of the 16 – 17 excess could be attributed to the sale of the Albany building, and the increase in Earned Income Tax revenue due to greater employment. I do not believe we can count on an ongoing increase in valuation, or earned income in the immediate future. Of greater concern to me is that almost all of the excess income in 18 – 19 was due to the 2.5% increase in property valuation. (I have not looked at 19 – 20 numbers because of the confusion caused by the virus).

This does not mean we should not use some of this money. Given our balance, the $100,000 from ACCESS funds is not unreasonable. I would use the CARES Act money to make up for virus related issues such as the decrease in EIT income which will hopefully not be ongoing. The same can be said for income from the Property Transfer Tax. Making up for the increased default on Property Taxes would also be a reasonable use of this money.

The 19 – 20 surplus should be used with the same care with which we used our fund balance in previous years. It should be used mostly for once-and-done expenses such as capital improvements, or funneled back into the budget incrementally over several years.

Exact amounts will need to be worked out, but I believe passing a budget this year without a tax increase to make up part of the shortfall, is extremely irresponsible. This is especially true given our lack of knowledge as to what having school open next year might entail.

I appreciate the economic pain the virus has caused many people. But even a 2.6 % increase in taxes should not add appreciably to that pain. An owner of the average $100,000 valued property would see an increase of about $77. Anyone who can afford their current $3,000 tax bill can afford a $3,077 tax bill. And those who cannot afford to pay the $3,077, certainly could not afford to pay $3,000.

If we truly want to help those in financial distress I would propose that at the least we extend the period for which taxes can be paid without penalty for those in need. This would be especially helpful for those waiting for unemployment benefits, or small business assistance funds, or just getting back to work. In fact, if an equitable and legal way to do so can be established, using those surplus funds to give a tax rebate to those truly in need, would ease far more of the pain than distributing $77 per $100,000 valuation among all tax payers.
